Then women were uneducated, and society corrupt. It seemed expedient that safeguards be placed about them which are not necessary nor expedient to-day.

which are not necessary nor expedient to-day.

"St. Paul commanded women to wear the veil in public assemblies, keep stlent in the churches and learn through their husbands. He commanded slaves to remain in subjection to their masters, and that all citizens submit to the Roman King—even when the King of that time was the cruel, tyrannical, unspeakable Nero. It would be a gross perversion of Paul's teaching to say that he favored slavery, sanctioned tyranny or commanded the subjection of women as a permanent condition of sowomen as a permanent condition of so-ciety, or to claim that if he were liv-ing to-day he would tell American women exactly what he wrote to the women of Corinth twenty centuries ago."

Says Bible Is Misused. Dr Pollard deprecated the fact that the Bible had been so often misused to the hindrance of the progress of the spirit of liberty and democracy. He asserted that God would not have given woman her splendid intellectual and spiritual discernment, her enor-mous capacity for achievement and then directed that she always use these by indirection, or by proxy.
"Society needs woman's interpreta-tion of life in every department of it."

he said, "and nothing can permanently stand, in the way of her complete, un-trammeled self-expression."

The speaker criticized the "indirect influence" theory and added; "The world needs the contribution woman can make to its welfare, and this contribution can never be given in full measure so long as the notion prevails that her thoughts, her feelings and her actions are of real worth only when they have been strained through a masculine percolator." Speedy triumph for the suffrage cause was predicted by Dr. Pollard.
